Leschetizky's Scale and Chord Exercises Leschetizky's Arpeggio Exercises.

PRICE, 50 CENTS EACH

The art of playing scales runs, etc., is known to comparatively few. The editor of Leschetizky's Scale Exercises, M. W. Butler, has studied under some of the best American teachers, but none of them called his attention to the fact that he was not using his thumb properly in the execution of scales and runs. In 1883 he departed for Germany for a five years' course of musical study in Berlin and Vienna.

In Berlin he studied piano-forte playing with Kullak, Klindworth and Reif. All seemed satisfied with his touch. It was not until he arrived in Vienna when Leschetizky pointed out to him that in order to execute with the right hand a rapid ascending scale or run evenly with the greatest velocity it is absolutely necessary that the thumb should pass quickly under the fingers (towards the next key it is to play instantly) as soon as the second finger has struck its key. It retards velocity and creates an uneven touch to wait until the third or fourth fingers have played before passing the thumb under. Leschetizky personally taught the editor his exercises for preparing the hand to execute scales, runs, etc., evenly and with the greatest velocity, all of which are published complete, and with full explanations as to how they should be practiced in Leschetizky's Scale and Arpeggio Exercises.

These books also contain instructive remarks by Paderewski and his teacher, Leschetizky, lessons explaining how all pianoforte music should be practiced.

THE LIVES OF GREAT PIANISTS.

FRANZ LISZT.

In the last ten years of the master's active, eventful life, there are three important incidents that require special mention. In 1876 he saw completed the work in which he had so earnestly co-operated, to which for years he devoted himself body and soul—the festival at Bayreuth. Until the publication of his correspondence with Wagner, it was never fully known what a share he had in the success of this gigantic enterprise. Hence it was no more than justice when, at the banquet given at the close of the first Nibelungen performance, Wagner designated him as the one, without whose assistance, the execution of the mighty project would have been impossible. Later in 1882, it became Liszt's privilege to listen to his friend's swan song, the performance of "Parsifal." Finally, in the spring of 1886, being then 74 years old, he still possessed sufficient physical and mental energy to accept an invitation from his friends in Paris and London, to visit the scenes of his former triumphs. In both cities he won fresh laurels as composer, and even as pianist at private concerts. After a performance of his "Holy Elizabeth," which may be characterized as a sensational success in the broadest sense, he left England with the intention of seeking rest from the fatigues of the journey in a prolonged visit to the castle of his compatriot, the painter Munkacz. But he did not find the needed rest and returned to Germany in broken health. In Sondershausen, where he attended all the meetings of the Artists Reunion and had the pleasure of listening to a superb rendering of his oratorio, "Christus," his condition caused much anxiety. During a temporary improvement in his health he undertook the journey to Bayreuth in order to attend the festival. Here, in spite of his physician's warning, he could not be deterred from attending a performance of "Tristan." Almost immediately afterward he was taken ill with pneumonia which in a little more than a week resulted in his death (July 31, 1886).

To his friends and admirers at a distance the news of his death came so unexpectedly that but few of them were able to follow his body to the grave. But the inhabitants of Bayreuth, as well as the strangers who had come to the festival, joined in a solemn funeral procession, and when his earthly remains were laid away in the churchyard at Bayreuth, every person present must have felt that a great and noble man had departed from the world.

Liszt's compositions are so numerous that only the most important among them can be mentioned here. According to August Gollerich, his biographer, the master left 1233 compositions of which 1122 have appeared in print.

Among these the piano pieces must be considered first, if only for chronological reasons. They may be classed as original compositions and transcriptions of the works of other composers. This division cannot be strictly maintained, however, because Liszt's transcriptions reflect his individuality so strongly that they may fairly be called his own creations. This can be seen in the "Soirees de Vienne," where he uses Schubert's melodies in such a way that the term transcription hardly applies to this work; neither is it appropriate in the case of "Hungarian Rhapsodies," for though the motive, with the characteristic and frequent use of the augmented second, and the constantly recurring final cadence, caught from the gypsies, yet in their artistic construction and elaboration they betray in every measure the independent creative musician. In his "Spanish Rhapsodies" the creative artist reveals himself more clearly yet, and they stand still higher as works of art, because of the insignificance of the material from which they were produced. The same may be said of his numerous operatic fantasias, in which he displays a marvelous faculty for discovering at once the most important feature of any given composition, musically and dramatically, and by his interpretation enhancing its musical value. Liszt's many transcriptions of songs, especially Schubert's, are not so independent, but are yet pervaded by individual creative power. In these the piano, as for instance, in Schubert's "Erlking" and Schumann's "Dedication," is raised far above its original narrow sphere and becomes almost the rival of the human voice. Liszt's art as a transcriber reaches its highest point when, in the presence of one of the "greatest," he expresses his own individuality, and undertakes to substitute his ten fingers for a whole orchestra. With his transcriptions (for the piano for two hands) of Beethoven's symphonies, including the ninth; or Berlioz's "Symphonie Fantastique," and the symphony, "Harold in Italy," in which he retained the original solo part, played by the viola; the "Spinning song" from the "Flying Dutchman," and the "Arrival of Guests at the Wartburg," from Wagner's "Tannhauser," Liszt has shown that nothing is impossible to the piano, and that this remarkable instrument, though in many respects inferior, is yet able to fulfill its mission, namely, to reflect the musical universe.

If we now turn to Liszt's original compositions we shall find that there are also two groups. In the first, technique is given the prominence, while the second aims at the representation of poetic ideas. But this distinction cannot be carried out strictly, because the works of the first group are without exception also poetic, and those of the second are also suitable for studies. Among the former are the Paganini studies, in which technique was the composer's chief object, and yet what poetic charm they have, especially the favorite study, "The Campanella," after the manner of the finale of Paganini's second concerto. As for the "Etudes d'Execution Transcendantes," such as "Ricordanza" (No. 9) and "Harmonies du soir" (No. 11), the two studies called "Waldesrauschen" and "Gnomesreigen," are they not likewise mental pictures of irresistible witchery?

On the other hand, the works of the second group must be considered as the high school of piano technique. No pianist of the present time can claim to have mastered technique, until he has tested his touch and his execution on Liszt's two concertos in E flat major, and A major, and on the mighty B minor sonata. Of the latter Wagner wrote, after hearing it for the first time, "A little while ago you were with me. The sonata is beautiful beyond conception, grand and graceful, profound and noble like yourself. It has moved me so deeply that I cannot express all I feel. Thank you a thousand times for the great enjoyment you have given me." But in perfecting his technique and his taste the ambitious piano player needs the smaller works of Liszt as well as the greater. Among these are the "Consolation" in which the sentimental trait in Liszt's nature finds its fullest expression, and also the "Annees de Pelerinage"—a series of fascinating tone pictures, wherein he tries to reproduce the impressions received from nature and works of art during his travels in Italy and Switzerland.

CAMP-FIRE GIRLS' MARCH

M. W. BUTLER

Marcato il Melodie

The musical score is written for piano in 4/4 time, featuring a key signature of one flat (B-flat). It consists of six systems of music, each with a grand staff (treble and bass clefs). The first four systems are marked with a forte 'f' dynamic. The fifth system begins with a piano 'p' dynamic, and the sixth system includes a 'cresc.' (crescendo) marking. The melody is primarily carried by the right hand, often using a marcato (marked) articulation. Fingerings are indicated by numbers 1-5 above the notes. The bass line provides a steady accompaniment with eighth and sixteenth notes. The piece concludes with a final cadence in the sixth system.

First system of musical notation. The treble clef staff features a melody with a forte (f) dynamic marking. The bass clef staff provides a harmonic accompaniment. Fingerings are indicated by numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 above the notes.

Second system of musical notation. The treble clef staff continues the melody. The bass clef staff continues the accompaniment. The system concludes with a fortissimo (ff) dynamic marking and the word "FINE" in the right margin.

Third system of musical notation. The treble clef staff features a melody with a piano (p) dynamic marking. The bass clef staff continues the accompaniment. The instruction "Marcato il basso" is written below the bass staff.

Fourth system of musical notation. The treble clef staff continues the melody. The bass clef staff continues the accompaniment.

Fifth system of musical notation. The treble clef staff continues the melody. The bass clef staff continues the accompaniment.

Sixth system of musical notation. The treble clef staff continues the melody. The bass clef staff continues the accompaniment. The system concludes with the instruction "D. C. al Fine" in the right margin.

DIXIE BELLS WALTZ

J. OWEN LONG

The musical score is written for piano in 3/4 time. It consists of five systems, each with a grand staff (treble and bass clefs). Fingerings are indicated by numbers 1-5 above or below notes. The piece features a variety of note values including eighth, quarter, and half notes, as well as rests. A double bar line appears at the end of the third system. The notation is clean and typical of early 20th-century sheet music.

THE WELBORN.

MARCH - TWO STEP.

FOR PIANO OR ORGAN.

Introduction.

By J. M. WELBORN.

A musical score for the song 'The Rose Tree'. It features a treble and bass staff. The treble staff has a key signature of one flat (B-flat) and a common time signature. The melody is written in a simple, folk-like style. The bass staff provides a harmonic accompaniment with chords and single notes. The score is written on a single page with a decorative border.

A handwritten musical score for the song 'The Rose Tree'. The score is written on two staves, a treble staff and a bass staff, both with a key signature of one flat (B-flat). The melody is primarily in the treble staff, featuring a series of eighth and sixteenth notes. The bass staff provides a simple harmonic accompaniment with dotted half notes and quarter notes. The music is divided into measures by vertical bar lines. The handwriting is in dark ink on aged, slightly yellowed paper. The title 'The Rose Tree' is written in a cursive hand at the top left of the page.

A musical score for a piano piece titled 'The Rose Tree'. The score is written on two staves, Treble and Bass, in G major (one sharp) and 2/4 time. The melody is in the Treble staff, featuring a series of eighth and sixteenth notes, with some measures containing triplets. The bass staff provides a harmonic accompaniment with chords and single notes. The piece consists of 16 measures, ending with a double bar line.

A handwritten musical score for the song 'The Rose Tree'. The score is written on two staves, a treble staff and a bass staff, both with a key signature of one flat (B-flat). The melody is written in the treble staff, and the accompaniment is in the bass staff. The music is in common time (C). The score consists of eight measures. The first four measures are the main melody, and the last four measures are a repeat of the first four. The handwriting is in ink on aged, slightly yellowed paper. The notes are clearly written, and the staves are hand-drawn. The overall style is that of a personal or working manuscript.

READ WHAT WE CLAIM FOR IT

A year's subscription is a volume of Vocal and Instrumental Compositions for the Piano and Cabinet Organ of the choicest variety. At least sixty-five subjects, listing at Forty Dollars, valuable copyright music appear, that cannot be found in any other magazine.

"THE LIVES OF GREAT MUSICIANS" will be instructive, entertaining and inspiring.

Each number always contains our latest pieces, and we are very careful to select such music that pleases the average musical ear, and some of the easiest and medium grades, so that the beginner in music can derive as much pleasure and benefit as the more advanced player.

Our Mr. Phil B. Perry selects the music for teaching purposes. Being a pupil of Leschetizky, a graduate of Kullak's Conservatory, Berlin, Germany, and a successful teacher, he knows the requirements of teachers far better than the publishers of other magazines who have not enjoyed his unusual advantages.

Our "Premium List," which embraces most liberal inducements for those who wish to act as agents, will be mailed free to any address upon application.

EXTRA—A beautiful Diploma, suitable for framing, is given with each volume.

The celebrated composer, J. OWEN LONG, writes:

"I am very fond of the BUTLER METHOD. My pupils are doing remarkably well, a-way a-head of those using other Methods. It sure is a pleasing, comprehensive course for teachers and students."
